

SUPPORTING YOUR BIOSECURITY PROGRAM

At Animal Health International we understand your work and your business. We know you face a range of daily challenges that include the risk of pathogen contamination impacting your animals. We're here to provide the highest level of support for your biosecurity programs. From delivery timing to route selection and more, we focus on the regular, detail-oriented practices that keep your operation safe.

Your partner in reducing exposure.

We take important measures to reduce the introduction of disease to your facility:

Our teams schedule deliveries to minimize physical contact between drivers, delivery vehicles and your operation.

We adjust our route planning to ensure that sanitized trucks proceed directly from our warehouse to your location and are used only for you on a given day. This minimizes the chance for exposures between our customers.

Our drivers work within your biosecurity protocols, cleaning and sanitizing equipment and using the required PPE.

Our trained and experienced support teams are available to strategize on biosecurity planning and logistics management. We can share information about events that may impact others in your state or region so that you can adjust what you're doing to get ahead of potential threats.

"Life is stressful enough, so to work with vendors like Animal Health International, that don't cause more stress, is a joy.

Getting them to deliver on a schedule so that we could house a month's worth of inventory at once was crucial to us. It reduced extra entries to the property."

Jeremy Robertson
Head of Live Production
for Brennenman Pork

ATTENTION TO DETAIL THAT REDUCES YOUR RISK

Single source of supply

As a single source supplier, we provide anything you need for animal care, for your employees and for overall business management. Partnering with us reduces the risk of engaging with deliveries from multiple origin points, each with their own arrival time and possibility for contamination. Our range of available products includes:

- vaccines
- pharmaceuticals
- feed
- state-of-the-art equipment and software
- office products
- work apparel

A state-of-the-art transportation fleet

Our transportation fleet is designed to ensure products reach you in top condition. These include climate-controlled trucks with set temperatures to accommodate for both extreme heat and cold on the road. Drivers set temperature levels so sensitive items maintain their integrity without freezing in winter or spoiling during summer heat.

For more information, contact your Animal Health International representative or visit our website at animalhealthinternational.com.

As your trusted partner,
Animal Health International is committed to supporting your biosecurity program.
